

REMNANTS OF A POWERFUL TRIBE

SMALL CAMP OF WINNEBAGOES AT KOSHKONG CREEK.

SITE OF AN OLD VILLAGE

Of Their Ancestors Is But a Short Distance Away at Carcajou Point.

Camped on Koshkong Creek is a little party of ten Indians, a plumed remnant of the once powerful tribe of Winnebago. Living in three tipis, made of canvas, boughs, fur paper and matting, this colony has spent the winter near the site of their old home and scene of their former glories several miles from Lake Koshkong itself.

Less than a century ago, as late as 1822, their ancestors, under the leadership of the redoubtable White Crow, possessed a village of twelve hundred people on what is now Carcajou Point. Early travelers write of this chief and his tribe of Winnebagoes; historians of the Black Hawk war tell of the Carcajou club and in its life was one of the most powerful of the Indian communities in southern Wisconsin.

Indian history tells us that White Crow and his village were built of houses rather than tipis. Miniature houses which were covered with bark. In his community were to be found at the time of the Black Hawk war such warriors as Broken or Spotted Arm, an Indian chief so named for wounds received at the English siege of Ft. Meles during the war of 1812, when the Winnebagoes were allies of the English, Whirling Thunder and Little Priest. These three were the chiefs held as hostages by General Dodge during the Black Hawk war to keep the Winnebagoes from joining the forces of that chief.

Old White Crow appears to have been considerable of an Indian. He is described by some as crafty and savage, drunken and treacherous and by others as the friend of the white man, a noted orator, not a warrior and head of the large community at Koshkong. At the present site of the old village was another village of the same tribe. Here old Whirling Thunder or Saw-waw or Karymanne held sway. This wonderful old chieftain was evidently over the White Crow. He was beside Tecumseh when he fell in the roof and sides are covered with matting and canvas as well as tar paper, the general outline being round or elliptical. The doorway is formed by a hanging strip of canvas.

Mr. Skayven has had several talks with these former owners of the Rock River valley and the pictures which accompany this article were taken by Charles Tallman, who accompanied Mr. Skayven on one of his visits within the past few weeks.

CURED LEAF MARKET STILL VERY QUIET

Packers Are Waiting for Better Business Conditions in the Eastern Centers.

Edgerton, Wis., April 10.—The buying of the tobacco crop goes steadily on and the movement is much quicker cutting out large areas from the unsold portion. While the great bulk of the sales are made at seemingly bargain prices, seldom raising the six cent figure, and much of it around the five cent mark, there are some few buyers at a fairly remunerative basis. The following transactions show the range of prices: Old Vols. 10 at 9 1/2 cent; Gibson & Anderson, 9 at 9 1/2 cent; A. Asleson, 9 at 9 1/2 cent; O. Peterson, 9 at 9 1/2 cent; B. C. Stebbins, 5 at 5 1/2 & 2; H. Higgins, 5 at 5 1/2; B. Montgomery, 5 at 5; A. M. Noddley, 5 at 5 1/2; Anson Dillon, 5 at 4 1/2; P. Lindtke, 8 at 2.

The cured leaf market is as yet under a cloud that shows no silver lining. Packers are hoping and waiting the return of better business conditions than at present appears in the eastern centers. We learn of the sale of a few hundred cases of forced sweetened Wisconsin at figures lower than old stock is held, and yet returns a profit to the seller.

Deliveries at receiving points continue liberal for growers are anxious to complete this work before entering upon their spring seedling.

Warehouse handling at the packing points is dragging because of the shortage of help. Two or three hundred hands could find employment for several weeks to come in this market and the same complaint is noted elsewhere in the tobacco section.

As yet very little has been done toward starting the seed beds, as suitable weather conditions have not yet arrived.

The shipments out of storage reach 20 carloads, 910 cases, from this market to all points for the week.

PACIFIC EXTENSION WORK BEING PUSHED

St. Paul Road Expected to Finish Line to Tacoma Within Two

Work on the Pacific extension of the St. Paul road to Tacoma and Seattle is being rapidly pushed to completion. Though it was at first thought that it might be completed by next year, it is doubtful if it can be finished before 1910. The present terminus of the road is at Lombard, a town in the western part of Montana, though through connections from St. Paul are only made as far as Marmarth.

The arrangements of the road with the Omaha Shovel and Pacific Pacific extension service are practically completed. The Manchurian railway is seeking to have Dabney made the terminus of the new ocean route. If this is done the St. Paul road will have through connections half way round the world.

RECOLLECTION OF HORSE TRADING

GEORGE P. FLOYD, AN OLD TIME RESIDENT TELLS OF

HONEST ANSE A RUNAWAY

Horse With One Eye That Was Purchased in Janesville in 1858 and Afterwards Became Famous.

George P. Floyd, a former resident of Janesville in the late fifties, who with his brother, for a time ran the old Hyatt house, has an interesting bit of the early history of Janesville which refers directly to the famous trotting gelding, Honest Anse, who for many years won large purses for his owners in noted races. Mr. Floyd is visiting his old friend County Clerk Lee and is enjoying looking over the city he knew fifty years ago. He writes of the horse named as follows:

"Some of the first-class trotters started in their trotting career from Janesville. The chestnut gelding, Honest Anse was one of those. Honest Anse proved to be a good horse. He trotted a number of successful races in Chicago against Rehder and others. His career was rather checkered.

"The spring of 1858 I was sitting in front of the Hyatt house in Janesville, talking with Phil, Echelesman, a butcher, when a team went flying by hitched to a farm wagon. The night horse was running with the other horse was trotting, and trotting fast. They took our eye; we followed the team to a yard in back of the old Myers hotel where they were stopped.

"We sized the trotter up and found he was a chestnut gelding six years old, of good formation, fifteen and a half hands high, with one eye. While we were looking the horse over a big fat Dutchman came running up. He was blowing like a porpoise and sweating like a bull, and nearly scared to death.

"Phil tackled him.

"Is this your team?" asked Phil.

"Yaw, dis is mine team, mine Got, val vil I do?"

"Are you a married man?" asked Phil.

"Yaw, I is married mit a frau and mine small childer."

"Well, old man, if you do not look out that one-eyed horse of yours will be the means of sending you to the grave yard and making a widow of your frau and orphan of your childer."

"Well, I think myself so, that damn getter he runs away every chance he gets and he makes the other horse run with him. He is one damn fool."

"Sell him, or give him away, or he will kill you."

"Well, by damn, if I could find a good, gentle horse I would trade mit him my horse."

"I have just the getter for you," said Phil. "Come down to my stable."

"Phil roped the Dutchman down to his stable, and gave him a dose of David Harum. He brought out an old mare, good looking but crazy; worth about twenty dollars."

"Now there is just the horse you want," observed Phil. "She is no sound as a new mule dollar, any woman can drive her and she will stand all day without hitching. You will always find her where you left her."

"Is dat so, well I tells you what I do, I trade my horse with the mare and ten dollars."

"Phil hauled out ten dollars as quick as a lamb could joggle his tail. Away went the poor Dutchman with his mare hitched with his other horse.

The mare worked all right double, but when hitched single she was rather balky to stand all day without hitching; some folks would call it balking.

"Phil gave the chestnut gelding to his brother John for handling. John was a regular trader at Janesville. The horse, Honest Anse, was sold by the Moore horse, he by Green's Bashan, he by Young Bashan, by Old Bashan, a horse imported from Tripoli. He was called Honest Anse after the Anse Rogers who was then keeping the American hotel at Janesville.

The horse was taken to Chicago, trotted a number of races in Chicago against Rehder, Prairie Boy and others. The horse improved so rapidly that in 1859 he was entered in a race for $2000 against Flora Temple and Princess at Kalamazoo. It was at that meeting in about 1859 that Flora Temple made her famous record of 2:19 1/4 in her third heat. Honest Anse was second in the race. He was then taken to California and trotted a number of races at Sacramento and San Francisco, driven by John Kelschman and Jim Eoff, when he disappeared.

"The spring of 1860-61 I was at Victoria, B. C. I strayed into the Buchanan saloon one evening and while taking a nip I spied a fine looking horse's tail hanging over the bar. 'That is a fine horse's tail you have there,' I said to the proprietor of the saloon; 'if the horse it belonged to was as fine looking as that tail he must have been a dandy.' 'Yes, he was a good horse. That tail was once on the horse Honest Anse that trotted against Flora Temple when she made her record of 2:19 1/4, at Kalamazoo, Michigan in 1859.'

"Hold your horses, I but you ten dollars that that tail was never attached to the animal of Honest Anse." The Englishman slipped up a ten dollar bill as quick as a wink, I covered it with another. The old fellow went to his safe and hauled out a roll of papers and in a few minutes proved to me that my ten dollars had gone 'where the wind blows to.'

"The horse was taken from California to Portland, Oregon, and trotted some successful races there. From there he was taken to Victoria, B. C. trotted in the three minute class. He lost his other eye, became useless and was turned out to shift for himself. He wandered into a yard one night, fell into a well and broke his neck. Thus ended one of the shining lights in the trotting horse's life. There are too many of such sad endings of our faithful friends. And faithfully performing his work and filling his owner's pockets with coin and when he became old and had outlived his usefulness, he is left to shift for himself, ignored and neglected."

"I am a poor old horse that somebody owns."

"That I am sadly neglected you can see by my bones. I wish some one would buy me, I wish I was sold."

"To a man with some feelings and one with a soul."

THE ROUNDUP COLUMN.

West Talks About Baseball, Tells a Yarn and Maltreats Joe Gans.

The good old baseball season has swung around once more. Now the "nature folks," the harden bank despoilers, the Venezuela trouble, Emperor William of Germany and other topics that have occupied our minds the past winter can take seats far in the background. They concern us not even a little. Important subjects need attention. They are as follows:

What teams look like pennant winners?

Is Christy Mathewson's arm in good shape?

Will Captain Frank Chance's foot bother him again?

THE HUB ABOUT TO BLOSSOM.

In Ty Cobb's batting eye as good as it was last season?

Will Captain Harry Lumley's leg be able to stand the strain this season?

Can Clark Griffith land the American league pennant?

Will Hans Wagner change his mind and get back into the game? These and other weighty questions must be considered and settled before all else.

Rube Waddell, who has received more advertising than any other ball player since Mike Kelly and Arlie Latham, is gifted with an acute sense of humor, as any of his ball playing companions can testify.

The clever George Edward is a fellow of many parts, and no one can be found who would be willing to testify on oath that the big Rube is not eccentric. The speedy pitcher is also witty in his eccentricity.

As a gay cutup the big St. Louis twirler has no peer. He stands alone in a class.

Last August, when the Athletics were playing in Washington, during their practice time George Edward Waddell, then a member of the Athletics, was engaged in carrying on his monkey-shines, much to the delight of the spectators, when Dr. Mike Powers half laughingly asked Rube:

"What the dickens makes you so foolish, Ed?"

"I don't know," replied Waddell, "except it came about through my father making me sleep under a crazy quilt when I was a boy."

The Americans of the City of Mexico have formed themselves into what they call a golf band. Dand patent pending is a good one. It can be used as a substitute for gull, bunch, cult, scream, mob, sneer and clique.

Come to our store and get a sample of Chi-Namel applied to wood. Take it home and test it.

First. Strike the wood sample a heavy blow with a hammer, and note that while the wood may be indented a quarter of an inch, the varnish has not marred or cracked. This proves that Chi-Namel is very elastic.

Second. Place the wood sample in a tea kettle, and note that boiling water does not turn it white. This proves that Chi-Namel contains no resin.

Third. Apply whiskey. This proves that Chi-Namel will stand upon bar tops.

Fourth. Allow a can of the varnish to stand open over night, and note that there is no evaporation. This proves that Chi-Namel contains no benzine.

Fifth. Spread varnish over flat surface, and brush in every direction, and note "self leveling" effect. This proves that all brush marks disappear, and the result will be pleasing no matter how inexperienced the applicator may be.

Old floors can be made to look like new hard wood.

No need to buy new furniture. Chi-Namel will make old furniture look BETTER than new furniture. Take no substitute. We invite you to prove to yourself there is NOTHING "just as good" as Chi-Namel.

TOM WALKER AND HIS PAPOOSE.

of visits of White Crow to the white settlements, the guidance he gave and part he played in the last bitter struggle of that wonderful Indian general, Black Hawk, at Wisconsin Heights, when his warriors were shot down, his squaws murdered and drowned and his children stabbed by the bayonets of the frontier soldiers.

This little band of Indians who have returned to the scene of their former glories claim to be descendants of a and scene of their former glories, several miles from Lake Koshkong, the brother of Yellow Thunder named White Thunder. Yellow Thunder was a famous Indian chief known in the Indian tongue as Wan-Kan-Wee-Kaw. He married a daughter of White Crow who was famed for her beauty and after the Indian treaty of 1828, is described as visiting Washington where she was known as an Indian princess and written of as very beautiful and talented.

Old War Club, the patriarch of the little colony, or Na-She-She in Winnebago tongue, is nearly seventy and for some time past has been confined to his wigwam where he lives with his wife, a second one, his doctor, Jim Crow, or in the Indian language, Za-Nu-Zinika, Standing Water, a daughter of his wife by a former marriage, Mary War Club, and a little girl, some relation, aged six or eight.

In another hut lives Tom Walker, Wan-Kan-Kow (Sunko Sunk), married to another daughter of Mrs. War Club by a former marriage and their little papoose, a bright little fellow of two. With Tom lives his old father, Wan-Kan-Kow, Sr. (Snako Sunk).

Two younger Indians occupy a smaller similar tepee. Both are well educated men and one, Albert Thunder, a nephew of Old War Club was brought up in a white family and attended the government Indian school.

THE FIRST TEPEE IS THAT OF OLD WAR CLUB, WHILE IN THE DISTANCE IS SEEN THAT OF ALBERT THUNDER.

In Kansas. Not only that, but he has studied for several terms at Lawrence university. He even is a veteran of the Spanish-American war, served Uncle Sam in the Philippines and now draws a pension of six dollars a month for disabilities received in the service. He is a bright, intelligent man, a fine musician, playing at the present time with the Janesville band and is an expert trapper and rifle shot.

His companion is named Louis Marsh, a cousin. He also is fairly well educated and the two have engaged to work an adjacent farm as hands during the summer months. During the past winter and early spring they have been most successful in their trapping and hunting and have kept the camp supplied with game. Old War Club's illness became severe. Old Dr. Standing Water, or Jim Crow, is quite a character. He is a relative of the famous old Menominee chieftain, Oshkosh, after whom the city of Oshkosh is named, but on his mother's side he is a Winnebago. He is rich in the lore of the Indian tribes; he knows much of their early history and in a talk last Sunday with Halvor Skayven, told many interesting facts as well as clearing up for a certainty the location of the old village of White Crow, which has been placed by some authorities on the shores of Lake Mendota, near Madison, and by others at Lake Koshkong. The village was at Koshkong, located on the same spot as latter of the Thawes during the war of 1812 and he signed the treaties for his tribe in 1832, being known as the "Commander."

Those two Indian villages appear to have been the most prominent in this immediate vicinity, although traces of an earlier one have been found at the junction of the Rock and Yahara river south of Koshkong. Old War Club and his little band have come back to their old hunting ground. Near Stoughton is the camp of War Club's brother and uncle of Albert Thunder, Yellow Thunder, Jr., both sons of old White Thunder, a brother of Yellow Thunder, one of White Crow's chiefs.

The Winnebagoes are not frequent visitors to this section of the state. By treaties and forcible removals, they have been driven from their old homes in Wisconsin to the west, have been scattered first through Iowa and Minnesota, thence into Nebraska and Kansas, and even into Indian territory. Once a powerful tribe, whose early history is closely identified with Wisconsin, they have dwindled into small scattered bands similar to the one at Koshkong Creek.

First allies of the French, they fought under de LaSalle, the French adventurer, at the defeat of Braddock in the French and Indian war. During the revolution they sided with the English and again under the same de LaSalle, now a British officer, joined Burgoyne's army which was to ravage the Hudson valley and which resulted in failure. Winnebago warriors were to be found fighting George Rogers Clark in the Illinois country; they mediated in the massacre at St. Louis and were otherwise vigilant in the cause of their friends, the English.

In 1810 they were with Tecumseh, the Shawnee chief. They fought against General Harrison in the battle of Tippecanoe on November 7, 1811.

and in 1812, on June 19, aided their friends, the English, again in capturing Fort Mackinac at the opening night of the war of 1812. During this struggle they were allies of the English, and Winnebago warriors were found in every battle where Indians were employed during this struggle.

After the Black Hawk war in 1832, when the Sacs and Foxes were given such a lesson, the settlers of Wisconsin demanded the Indians be sent west of the Mississippi. The big villages were broken up, the tribes were more scattered than ever and while the majority were persuaded to cross the Mississippi many remained in Wisconsin, hiding in small colonies and camping near the sites of their old homes.

Old War Club was not born during these stirring times. His father, White Thunder, while not mentioned in the annals of the early historians, came of a distinguished family and doubtless was a chief of distinction. The little colony at Koshkong Creek first camped on the old camp site, known to the Indians for ages, on the Rufus Bingham farm, but a savage bull caused them to move to their present location.

NATION'S CHARTER MUST BE GUARDED

GOV. JOHNSON DEFENDS CONSTITUTION AT SHILOH.

SPEAKS ON BATTLEFIELD

Minnesota Executive Dwells Upon Danger If the Federal Courts Supervise Action of States.

Shiloh, Tenn., Apr. 11.—That the people must assert their rights to prevent nullification of the constitution and that they must rise above the fallibility of judicial tribunals was declared here Friday in an address by Gov. John A. Johnson of Minnesota, aspirant for the Democratic presidential nomination. The monument erected by the state of Minnesota in the National park at Shiloh to the memory of the Minnesota soldiers who fell on that field was dedicated. Gov. Johnson and his staff, accompanied by a party of 50 prominent men of Minnesota, were present and participated in the dedicatory exercises. Ideal spring weather prevailed.

Gov. Johnson Presented.

Gen. L. P. Hubbard, chairman of the Minnesota monument commission, presided. Gov. Johnson spoke in part as follows:

"The scheme of government devised by our forefathers was adopted after most mature deliberation and after the fullest investigation, and only when they were convinced that in the distribution of the powers of government the rights of the people would be respected. It was founded upon the theory that the right existed in the people to make, alter and modify their form of government, and to this end the several states in constitutional convention agreed upon and adopted a constitution which was the foundation upon which this nation rests. But, as Washington said, 'the constitution which at any time exists, till changed by an explicit and authentic act of the whole people, is sacredly obligatory upon all.'

Must Obey the Government.

"The further heritage of the power and right of a people to establish government presupposes the duty of every individual to obey the established governments. While the primary object of a written constitution is to define governmental powers and to limit governmental departments, the overwhelming necessity for such an instrument is to prevent invidious encroachments upon the rights of the individual citizen, both from those in office and from those who by reason of their wealth and power have an influence far greater than that possessed by the average citizen. And so the constitution of the United States was regarded by its framers as an instrument of the most sacred import, an alteration of which could only be made by the people themselves, in whom all ultimate power is vested, and then only after the fullest discussion and widest publicity."

Peril in Recent Decision.

"Recently there has come from the highest judicial tribunal in the land a decision of vital interest and concern to the American people, because it has established a principle, as stated by one member of the court, which would work a radical change in our governmental system and would inaugurate a new era in the American judicial system and in the relations of the national and state governments. It would enable the subordinate federal courts to supervise and control the official action of the states as though they were dependencies or provinces. If this is the result of this decision it is, to my mind, one of the unhappy incidents in the history of our republic, because the very theory of our government is based upon the right of the states to control absolutely their own domestic affairs."

If, then, our whole system of government is changed, have we not only retarded the progress of the government, but have we not gone back a century toward a centralized form of government which is not to the advantage of the people? What this government needs is not more power. What it needs today is so to distribute the privileges under the government that all citizens will have equal opportunity."

Money Troubles Lead to Death.

New York, Apr. 11.—Charles A. Murphy, a prominent lawyer and real estate dealer, committed suicide in a room in the Astor house some time Thursday night by shooting through the head. A brief note which Murphy left for his wife showed that he had planned to kill himself. He was president of the Brooklyn Heights Improvement company and secretary and treasurer of the Key West (Fla.) Electric company. His suicide is attributed to financial troubles.

Cut in Freight Rates Ordered.

St. Louis, Mo., Apr. 11.—The state board of railroad commissioners Friday ordered reductions in freight rates in western South Dakota ranging from ten to 43 per cent. The greatest reductions are made on immigrants' goods and groceries. It is believed the railroad companies will accept the judgment of the board and put the reduced rates into effect at once.

HOUSE DISCUSSES THE NAVAL BILL

PROGRAM REPORTED DEFENDED BY FOSS AND PADGETT.

OTHERS WANT BIG NAVY

General Debate Gives Chance to Many Opponents—Commercial Interests Oppose Aldrich Currency Bill.

Washington, Apr. 11.—The dove of peace hovered over the house of representatives Friday. Instead of interminable roll calls and clashes of party leaders on questions of parliamentary law, there was an orderly session devoted almost entirely to the consideration of the naval appropriation bill.

Both Chairman Foss of Illinois and Mr. Padgett of Tennessee of the committee on naval affairs, made exhaustive speeches justifying the action of the committee in reporting what they characterized as a conservative naval program for the next fiscal year. Messrs. Payton of Louisiana, McKinley and Knowland, California, pleaded for a navy of such size as to be capable of upholding at all times the honor of the country at home and abroad, while Mr. Bartholdt of Missouri advocated a halt in naval increase and the substitution for it of arbitration in matters of international disputes.

All Kinds of Topics.

Many other speeches were made under the order of general debate on the naval bill, but they were on other subjects. The first included Messrs. Webb of North Carolina, who favored the regulation of interstate traffic in intoxicating liquors; Lamar of Missouri, who wanted a stricter Sunday observance law for the District of Columbia; Touvelle of Ohio, who pleaded for a monument to the men under Gen. St. Clair and Wayne, who fell in battle against the Indians; Perkins of New York, who desired free wood pulp; Kustermann of Wisconsin, who emphasized the necessity for decent American legation buildings abroad, and Mr. Allen of South Carolina, who pleaded for a refund of the cotton tax.

Oppose Aldrich Bill.

There were four representatives of large commercial interests before the house committee on banking and currency Friday, all of them opposing the Aldrich currency bill which they declared would do no good and might result in much harm to the business interests of the country. Victor Morawetz of New York made an extended argument against the bill.

The other speakers were E. W. Clark of Detroit, Frank De La Lanza of Philadelphia, and Horace White of New York.

OUR SATURDAY NIGHT

"There's no man wholly white, there's no man wholly right—

There's no man wholly holy at all; Each pretends to be meek when he's well fed and sleek—

But he fights with his back to the wall.

There's no man wholly wrong, there's no man wholly long—

From the crown of his head to his feet;

All are brothers, at last, of one family vast—

When you're down to the good red meat."

This scrap, of homely sentiment, from the "Ohio State Journal," expresses very tersely the elements of human frailty, which unite in a bond of common fellowship the brotherhood of man.

It may be humiliating to admit that the strength of this relationship is based on human weakness, yet it is gratifying to know that there are no favorites in the race.

The notion prevails, to some extent, that the accident of birth and environment has much to do with life, and with the development of character, and the statement is frequently made that "blood tells," and the boy or girl is fortunate who is well born.

There is truth in the argument, so far as opportunities are concerned, for the fact is conceded, that the boy who comes from the average American home, is better equipped than the lad whose birthplace is across the seas.

The accident of birth has much to do with conditions and advantages, even in this country. In all the colleges of the land is found a liberal sprinkling of young men who are in position to procure an education without thought or worry, so far as expense is concerned.

One of these favored sons, from the University of Iowa, spent a few days in the south, this winter, hunting shells for geological research. He belonged to the "snobby rich" and had journeyed across the continent three times in as many months spending money as freely as a millionaire.

Three of his classmates were in the automobile class, and it was difficult for the young man to realize how any boy could graduate with honor unless he possessed a four-cylinder car.

The comparison may seem a little odious but across from the hotel where this young man was stopping, was the humble home of a colored man who was self-educated and self-made.

He was intelligent and well informed, a fine mechanic and a good superintendant, possessing the ability to work a force of men, both white and colored, and commanding a salary of $1500 a year. Blood sometimes tells, but in this case the verdict was in favor of the despised race.

The accident of birth and association has much to do with what people regard as right and wrong, for while the Christian world is a unit in recognizing the old Mosaic code as authority, on questions of absolute right and wrong, it is far from agreeing on the larger code of unwritten laws, which have to do with questions of expediency.

America is the adopted home of more nationalities, than any nation on the globe. These people come to us from every quarter of the old world, with habits of thought and life so thoroughly established that no power can change them, yet aside from the scattering refugees of anarchy, they are law-abiding and law-respecting citizens.

The German boy, confirmed when a lad in the church of his father, may drink his mug of beer at the family table, and later in life may sit with wife and children in a booth at the palm garden, and yet be innocent of violating conscience.

The question of Sabbath observance and amusements, are largely questions of education and environment. They belong to the domain of personal liberty, a domain which every man should respect, so long as freedom does not conflict with public well-being.

The great mass of humanity, whether citizens of this or any other country, observe the law, not because they fear it, but because they respect it. By the same token men are honest, and because of this widespread honesty, world-wide confidence is inspired to an extent that warrants credit to be extended so liberally that 95 per cent of the great volume of business is a credit business based on confidence.

In the realm of conduct are many questions where conscience is the only guide, and conscience is the individual equipment of every soul created. It is the God in man known as "the still small voice" which always prompts to do right, and never to do wrong.

While this silent monitor is an infallible guide its mission is not to determine what right is, that belongs to the realm of judgment which is governed largely by education and environment.

This is why the opinion of many good people differ so widely on questions of what are called right and wrong. The man who sits in an engine cab with hand on the lever, all day Sunday, may have just as clear a conscience as the man in the pew who would violate his conscience by traveling on the Sabbath day. Both are obeying the voice of conscience and doing right as they understand it.

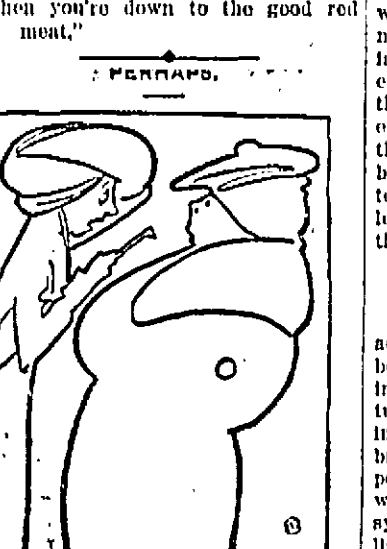

The same is true regarding amusements which to some people are harmless, while to others they represent the essence of depravity. On this class of questions, and many others which belong to the realm of non-essentials, we believe what we have been taught to believe, and what one man's conscience approves, another's condemns.

For this reason there is room for the broadest charity, for the world is better than it seems and the average mortal aims to do right as he understands the right.

"There's no man wholly white, there's no man wholly right—
There's no man wholly holy, at all, Each pretends to be meek when he's well fed and sleek
But he fights with his back to the wall.

"There's no man wholly wrong, there's no man wholly long—
From the crown of his head to his feet;
All are brothers, at last, of one family vast—
When you're down to the good red meat."

ARROGANCE OF THE WEALTHY.

Pitiful Snobishness Exhibited by One Rich Woman.

A family removed from the country to the outskirts of the city, and brought their chickens along. The good woman of the household sold a few eggs among her neighbors, charging 20 cents a dozen. She was perfectly content with the 90 cents; the neighbors were perfectly content with the eggs. However, informed by her husband, a woman of wealth and position proposed to have some of those eggs.

"But it is ridiculous to pay only 20 cents a dozen!" she declared. "The ideal I am willing to pay 20, if they are fresh, I shall tell her so."

She called away in her awe—and evidently she "told her," for the next time that the landlady applied for eggs they were 30 cents.

It was the unfairness of the rich—the arrogance of wealth. She had money to waste, and she was not satisfied unless she was forcing it somewhere. Ten cents, to her, indicated the difference between wealth and poverty. So it did to the landlady—but from an opposite angle.—Edwin L. Sablin, in Lippincott's.

Odd Beliefs About Butchers.

"Butchers never serve on juries in murder trials," said a court clerk. "They are always challenged if they try to, because they are thought to be cruel. They are thought to hold death too lightly. It is feared that they might vote carelessly to hang a man whose strict justice demanded the man's release. Of course, I suppose, it isn't true, this belief about butchers, especially nowadays, when, thanks to the meat trust, butchers don't slaughter. But in the past, when every day they killed cows and sheep and calves, butchers must have inclined a little toward cruelty, at least toward recklessness regarding death—don't you think so?"

First Post Office.

The first letter post, in the modern acceptance of the word, seems to have been established in the Hanse towns in the early part of the thirteenth century. A line of letter-posts, connecting Austria with certain towns in Lombardy, followed in the reign of Emperor Maximilian. In 1481, when Edward IV. was at war with Scotland, a system of relays of horses was established in the north in order to provide the king with the latest news from the seat of war. The first regular post route between England and Scotland was established by Charles I. in 1625.—New York American.

Enough Said.

"Ten and coffee," said the doctor, "are both bad for you. Your life will be shortened many years if you continue to drink such stuff."
"Oh, but doctor," she replied, "I couldn't think of getting along without a cup of coffee in the morning and a cup of tea at luncheon."
"Very well, I've told you as plainly as I can what the effect will be. And, furthermore, both tea and coffee are bad for your complexion."
"I shall never drink another drop of either,"—Chicago Record-Herald.

Lord and Marquis.

The title lord is applied to five grades of English nobility, dukes, marquises, earls, viscounts and barons, so that we cannot say that a lord is higher or lower than a marquis. The grades of nobility in England run in the above order, with the addition of the baronet. The latter, however, does not receive the title of lord. The son of a duke is by courtesy a marquis, and the son of a marquis is similarly an earl.

The Fast Part.

"Did I understand you to any Barnes is traveling in fast company just now?"
"Lows Comedy—I said he went out with a fast company. That show he went out with is busted and trying to get home."

CAUSE FOR SORROW.

Bobby—Hoo-hoo, hoo-hoo, papa just slipped and broke his foot!
Passerby—Never mind; he'll be better soon.
Bobby—Hoo-hoo! Every one saw him fall—but me, hoo-hoo!

A SLANDER.

She—But you told me you cannot meet your creditors.
He—Oh, but Jove, that's an awful fib. Why, I meet 'em wherever I go, really!

CAUTION, NOT POLITENESS.

"Seems to me those two men are carrying politeness too far! To wait in the rain at this hour of the night, each urging the other to enter the house first!"
"Probably the wives of both of them are waiting for them inside the door!"—Filibuster Dilletter.

Not Drifting

There is such a thing as drifting in business and professional life. Just leading along day by day, taking things as they come. Such a course does not get a man anywhere except nearer to the poorhouse. Dr. Richards in his Dental work is not a drifter.

He has a definite policy. He works towards an end. That end is to please his every patient just a little better than his competitors. Does this policy win?

The facts are, his Dental practice has grown during the last seven years until he has by far the largest Dental business in Janesville. Good work will win out.

Vigilant effort to avoid hurting also wins out. Reasonable prices ought to appeal to your better judgment also. Try him for your next Dental work, and you too will be convinced that he makes good.

HERMAN TOPP IS BEHIND THE BARS

DROVE TO TOWN AND SURRENDERED THIS AFTERNOON.

HARDLY LOOKS LIKE BANDIT

Or "The Terror of the Evansville Marsh" as He Was Pictured—Wanted for Uttering Alleged Worthless Checks.

With the peaceful surrender of the "Terror of the Evansville marsh" this afternoon, what promised to be a big sensation collapsed like a house of cards. Herman Topp, pictured as a dashing desperado, a man with a dash of the devil, ready to shoot at sight anyone who dared to molest him in his favorite pastime of shooting muskrats or, as Constable Dulin would have it, "hiding like a hooliver under water," drove to town with his father, arriving at the county jail about 1:30. The father inquired for Sheriff L. U. Fisher and upon learning that he was at Footville, seemed quite disappointed. "He told me he wanted to see my boy and I have brought him in," said the older Topp. "Oh, well if that's the case, I can attend to the matter," said Topp. He was then escorted to the jail office and talk the matter over. He offered no resistance, when, once inside the door, the turkey placed him under arrest and searched him. No firearms were found on his person.

For Uttering Worthless Checks Topp is a man about 28 years of age and has been living with his father on a farm in the town of Center just west of the C. & E. Fisher place and between Footville station and Laydon. It is alleged that during the past few months he speculated heavily in livestock on a falling market, and gave to a number of parties checks on the Grange bank at Evansville without having any deposit there to meet the said orders. Richard Stark of the town of Center claims to have sold him two head of cattle for $25 and to have received a check for that amount which was cashed by the First National bank of Janesville but protested at Evansville. After Stark had reimbursed the bank, he held the check ten days and tried to get a settlement. Topp agreed to pay but failed to do so. Last Friday a warrant for his arrest was sworn out by Nolan, Adams & Reeder. An Officer went to the home of Topp on Saturday and secured a promise from the father that the boy would come in to face the music on Tuesday. When he didn't keep his promise the sheriff and constable went out there. The father told them that he couldn't get hold of his son and that he supposed him to be in the marsh. The officers made three trips thither and got into water up to their waists in the course of their pursuit yesterday. Jeffers, Mount, Smith & Avery have a number of similar claims against Topp and P. Conway of Center who is in town today is another who has a worthless $25 check in his possession.

Appearance in Guileless At the county jail this afternoon Herman Topp talked in a surprised, dazed sort of a way about his arrest. He said that he had supposed he had money in the bank and that he hadn't entertained the remotest idea of defying the officers—had he would have come in long ago had he known they wanted him. He is a strapping fellow, of honest address and bearing and shows no signs of insanity. It is said that he never uses strong drink and that his friends believe that if he has committed any of these state's prison offenses, they have been accomplished with a conscience void of offense.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Sarah Francis Cummings. Mrs. Sarah Francis Cummings was born in Hancock, Berkshire county, Massachusetts, September 6, 1820. Her maiden name was Sarah Francis Smith and she was the fifth child of a family of thirteen, four of whom are still living—John I. Smith of Sumner, Mass., Nathaniel K. Smith of Sharon, Wis., Judge B. N. Smith of Los Angeles, Calif., and Mrs. L. L. Badger of Denver, Colo.

In her early childhood the family moved to Horseheads, New York, and later to northern Illinois, settling on Buffalo Prairie, near Harvard, in 1838. She was married in June, 1844 to John Cummings and until the year 1867 they lived in the town of Chenoey, McHenry county, Illinois. Then they moved to Janesville where the family resided until the death of the father in 1901. Since then she has made her home with her children.

In February of this year she went to Alhambra with her daughter, Mrs. E. H. Harlow, hoping that the change to a mild climate would be beneficial and it was there that she passed away. The immediate cause of her death was cancer of the stomach.

Five children are left to mourn her loss, two having already preceded her to the great beyond, Jennie in 1886, and George R. in 1887. The living children are D. S. Cummings of this city, John H. of Ft. Atkinson, Wis., Hiram M. of Decorah, Iowa, Mrs. H. P. Truax of Kenosha, Wis., and Mrs. E. H. Harlow of Albuquerque, N. Mexico, and a daughter in law, Mrs. J. B. Stevens of this city.

The funeral was held this afternoon at two o'clock from Trinity church, the Rev. Henry William of officiating. The pall bearers were E. G. Harlow, Charles Evans, James Meade, George Spaulding, T. Snyder and Charles Viney and the interment was in Oak Hill cemetery.

Anna Stella Cunningham, the two week old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Cunningham of the town of Harmony, died last night at eleven thirty. The funeral will be held from St. Mary's church at two o'clock in the afternoon tomorrow.

Last year Mr. Kimball brought in a similar bunch on the 15th of the month. These little flowers are the first real harbingers of spring to appear and give promise of warm days in the near future.

CONSIDERABLE TALK ON COUNCIL'S ACTION

Probable Vote on City Marshalship Creates Much Comment.

One of the chief topics of conversation on the streets today is the probable outcome of the action on Monday night, taking a vote on the question of city marshal. The pros and cons of the situation are freely discussed. Friends of the aldermen uphold them in their action, but they are few, business men and taxpayers generally deplore the possibility of an expensive lawsuit into which the city may be thrown as a result of the determination of certain aldermen to terminate of certain aldermen to determine once and for all if their control of the police department of the city is at an end. Under the charter regulations the choice of the city marshal lay with the council. It gave certain aldermen power to control the police policy of the city by intimidation. Under the new law, a law which had its conception to remedy this evil, this power is gone forever. The holders of the alderman and the men behind the aldermen, thought to be done away with by this statute. The members of the council who are making the fight appear to be actuated by no desire to choose one special candidate but to assert their rights. Alderman Dulin stated at the special session the other evening that he had nothing against Mr. Appleby, the present incumbent, yet also voted against a motion by Alderman Sheldon that the council take the opinion of three of the leading attorneys of the city on the law in question before laying the city liable to an expensive suit. One businessman this morning stated that the council was wrong in the action they were contemplating. That they could test the law easily by instructing the city attorney to bring the matter to the attention of the state attorney general who would give an opinion relative to the matter. Members of the council, who have been instrumental in bringing this condition of affairs about, however state they are in the fight to a finish and mean to let no stone remain unturned to satisfy what they consider "sound" dignity. Should they be successful in naming another marshal than Mr. Appleby, it will mean a long and expensive lawsuit. Under the state law, binding until declared unconstitutional by the supreme court, Appleby is the city marshal. The burden of proof lies with the city to oust him and show that his right to the office is null and void. Of the three attorneys frequently mentioned by some of the aldermen as having given an opinion the law was not binding. One says he gave an entirely opposite opinion in the same question in Belmont and the other stated he had not read over the law and had not ever given an opinion one way or the other.

NOTHING OF VALUE IN MISSING SACKS

All Second Class Mail in Mail Pouch Stolen Night Before Last at Depot.

Postmaster Valentine stated this morning that there was nothing of value in the contents of the second mail pouch found in the rear of B. H. Baldwin's residence on Linn street yesterday morning. The contents of which were missing, Mail Agent Williams, on his arrival in the city last evening, stated that this sack was made up between Fond du Lac and Janesville, was very light and containing nothing but packages of papers, all second class matter and no merchandise. Thus far no post-office officials have reached the city to investigate the affair and Mr. Valentine does not expect one.

Are You Willing?

To buy your goods in Janesville? If you can do so well as to send away to mail order houses? If you want the retail merchants of Janesville to prove what they say, bring your catalogue and your list of goods you want and we will sell them to you as cheap as they are in these catalogues and you want have to pay the freight. If we pay the freight, we call that underselling, don't you? We can't prove anything to you without your helping us. We want your trade. You would just as soon buy as if you thought you could buy just as cheap. Why not test it? The man or woman who buys their goods of a mail order house and expects his neighbors in Janesville to buy goods of him, or to buy labor of him, or to buy professional services of him is economically a leech. He is sucking industrial blood out of town and gives none back. He sends his profit out of town like a Chinaman and has no more right to a standing in the community than such a foreigner.

We are all neighbors industrially in this good old town, and the man or woman who sends away for his goods is not one of us—He belongs nowhere and deserves no man's support or credit in Janesville.

It is time to change and get together. It is time to reform ourselves and not our neighbors, by buying everything at home whether the neighbors do or not. And now is the time to begin, and we shall begin by the publicity route.

Now, in all kindness, don't you think it is about time to put a stop to this business, sending money away to further enrich the coffers of men who are now rated in the millions, paying more for goods than Janesville merchants charge you, keeping them from the honest profit they are entitled to, injuring your neighbor and yourself at the same time.

Hoping you will accept this letter in the spirit in which it is written, and give us your cooperation in developing the industries of this our home city, we are,

Very truly yours,

YOUTHFUL STRANGER HELD ON SUSPICION

Seventeen-year-old C. L. Smith Arrested for Trying to Sell Lady's Gold Pin Set with Pearls.

Up to noon today no action had been taken with regard to C. L. Smith, the seventeen-year-old youth claiming Chicago as his home, who was arrested here on suspicion last evening as the outcome of his attempt to dispose of a solid gold lady's pin valued at about $15. The boy has the appearance of a hobo and Olin & Olson, to whom he offered the jewelry, notified the police office as soon as he had left the store. Smith next made an unsuccessful effort to dispose of it at a second hand store on North Main street. Acting on the description he had received, City Marshal George Appleby accosted the youth near the East Side fire station. In response to inquiries he promptly stated that his name was Smith and that he lived at 31 High street, in this city. The city marshal was measurably convinced that he had made a mistake and was about to allow him to go his way when the proprietor of the second hand store, in response to questions, pointed to the retreating figure and stated that the boy had just tried to sell the pin to him. Smith was immediately placed under arrest. He said that he secured the pin from a hobo in exchange for some tobacco but this story failed to satisfy the officer and he will probably be held for a day or two in the hope that some claimant to the property may put in an appearance.

FACULTY DEFEATED BY SENIOR PLAYERS

High School Athletic Carnival Enjoyed By Many—Seniors Win Relay Race.

Last evening in the high school gymnasium about two hundred spectators witnessed the annual athletic carnival. The first contest on the program was an inter class relay race, the Freshmen and Juniors race was won by the Juniors. The race between the Sophmores and Seniors was won by the Seniors. After a short rest the Juniors and Seniors ran the race being won by the Seniors. Those Seniors on the champion team were, Leo Aspinwall, Roger Cunningham, Vincent Koch and Willy H. Tallman. The relay race was followed by a basket ball game between the Seniors and the Faculty. The Faculty appreciated their inability to play basket ball so they refused to allow members of the regular team to play in the hopes of beating the Seniors. Being aware of this fact the Seniors team prepared themselves for the struggle of their lives and much to the surprise and disappointment of the Faculty, the game ended with the Seniors 5 and 6 in the favor of the Seniors. The teams consisted of Foreward V. Koch and J. Nazum, Guards L. Woodworth and L. Atwood, Center R. Church, Faculty Forewards W. Vlymen and V. Beers, Guards G. C. Huel and Mr. Rahr, Center Munrois, Mr. Heers according to his custom played a star game and Mr. Rahr true to his promise did not lay up any of the Seniors. Mr. Bennett refereed the game.

FIERCE RIOT IN PENSACOLA

IMPORTATION OF STRIKE BREAKERS CAUSES BATTLE.

Street Car Men from St. Louis Are Attacked and Fifteen of Them Are Beaten.

Pensacola, Fla., Apr. 11.—The bringing of a carload of strike breakers from St. Louis Friday afternoon by the Pensacola Electric company was the signal for rioting and disorder which resulted in the injury of 15 of the imported men.

No sooner had the strike breakers arrived and started for the car sheds than a fight occurred between them and the sympathizers of the union men and from the corner of Palafox and Wright streets, where the first battle occurred, there was a continuous riot in which bricks, bottles and shovels were hurled at the strike breakers, and in turn the latter fired shots and used heavy sticks and bricks. For over an hour the riot continued, the strike breakers gradually getting nearer to the car barns, but before they reached there 15 had been wounded.

When near the car barns, so fierce was the onslaught on the body of imported men that they separated and fled, 30 running into a negro's house, while the remainder reached the car barns and barricaded the doors. The 30 men in the house barricaded the doors and it took the police over an hour to disperse the mob and remove the men to places of safety.

All night there were great crowds on the streets.

The mayor has issued a proclamation closing all saloons and the board of public safety has ordered the marshal to swear in a sufficient number of deputies to quell the disturbance. Seventy strike breakers were marched to the city jail, where they were kept in safety all night.

Benjamin Commons, vice-president of the International Association of Street Railway Employees, made an address urging the strikers to disperse and go to their homes quietly.

BAD FLOODS IN SOUTHWEST.

One Man Killed and Traffic Impeded in Missouri.

Joplin, Mo., Apr. 11.—One man killed, railroad traffic impeded, cavans on the electric and St. Louis & San Francisco lines near Joplin and mines in the Hughes-Peacock district inundated, are some of the features of the flood that is sweeping southwest Missouri. Levi Sevier, a miner, was drowned in the Hughes mine.

Near Monett, the overflow from Spring river washed out the St. Louis & San Francisco tracks and trains are delayed. The tracks of the Missouri Pacific are washed out near Granby. Portions of Carthage are inundated. The big dam of the Spring River Water company at Vark, Kan., is holding its own against the great volume of water that is pressing against it.

Fort Worth, Tex., Apr. 11.—Excessive rains fell in North Texas, the Panhandle and West Texas Thursday and Friday. The country around Gainesville, near the Oklahoma line, is under water, streets in Gainesville are flooded and streams are out of their banks. Farmers report much damage has been done in that section.

Huntington, W. Va., Apr. 11.—Mrs. William Addins and her two young children were drowned Friday when their residence slipped into Guyanotte river. The house was located on the river bank which had been largely undermined during the recent floods.

Oil Company Indicted. Little Rock Grand Jury Also Gets After Alleged Bootlegers.

Little Rock, Ark., Apr. 11.—The Pulaski county grand jury reporting Friday delivered to Judge R. J. Lea 18 indictments, four of which were against the Waters-Pierce Oil company, charging discrimination against individuals and towns and conspiracy for granting rebates.

Thirteen indictments are against former legislators and associates for alleged bootlegging in the legislature of 1905. The names are being withheld until service is made by the sheriff.

Two Dishonest Bankers Sentenced. Oklahoma City, Okla., Apr. 11.—Judge Pollock, in the United States circuit court Friday night, sentenced C. R. Hildreth, former president of the Capital National bank in Guthrie, to serve seven years and five months in the federal prison at Leavenworth.

A. S. Hayes of Little Rock, Ark., former cashier of the First National bank of Lexington, Okla., was sentenced to five years in the penitentiary. Hildreth was convicted on a charge of misappropriating bank funds and Hayes for falsifying reports to the comptroller of the currency.

Losses His Life to Win Wager. Sulphur Springs, Ark., Apr. 11.—As a result of a wager Ed H. Galloway, of New York city, a noted athlete, lost his life here Friday in a bucking creek in the presence of hundreds of spectators, who had gathered to watch his sensational attempt to ride the dam in a frail rowboat.

GOSSIP OF THE RING.

Owen Moran, English Featherweight, on Trail of Abe Attell.

JIM BARRY IS AMBITIOUS.

Chicago Heavyweight Wants to Visit England to Fight Burns—Johnny Coulson a Clever Pugilist—"Mysterious Billy" Smith Talks Fight Again.

Charley Harvey, manager of Owen Moran, the English featherweight, who battled to a draw with Abe Attell on the coast recently, wants the sculp of Attell or Battling Nelson or, better still, both. Harvey has posted $1,000 to back his challenge, and the silvery-toned manager thinks that both Nelson and Attell will have to come through with a little fight talk or acknowledgment that they count the Britisher too tough game.

Harvey meets the terms demanded by Attell when the champion first talked of a return fight in all but one point, and that is regarding the distance the fight is to go. Attell wants a short bout, while Harvey insists that the bout go twenty-five or more rounds. The weight named by Attell, 122 pounds four hours before the men enter the ring, suits down to the ground. For the Nelson fight Harvey will sign up at 130 pounds, a weight Nelson could recently he can make with ease and without weakening himself.

The National Sporting club of London has made an offer of a $5,000 purse for a twenty round fight between Owen Moran and Jimmy Delacoll, both of whom claim the English featherweight championship. This is the largest purse ever offered two small men for a ring battle in England.

The proposition stipulates that the fight is to be held in the National Sporting club on the night of Derby day.

It has been a long time since the parawrights, as the 105 and 110 pounders are known, have held the center of

Mr. Biddle belongs to an athletic family. From early youth he has been taught to cultivate his muscles along same lines, and today he represents the highest type of the American amateur athlete.

One of the most amusing careers occurred during the past winter. In order to get strenuous exercise he boxed regularly with big Jim Daly, who used to spar with Jim Corbett. One day Daly asked Biddle to accompany him to the University of Pennsylvania.

Jim Barry, the young Chicago heavyweight, is willing to go to London and fight Tommy Burns for the $5,000 purse widely discussed in the Jack Johnson negotiations. Further than this, Barry will pay his own expenses of trip to London and what it costs him to prepare for the battle.

Billy Gee, the Waukegan (Ill.) farmer, who once handled the managerial reins over Tommy Burns, has taken charge of Barry and will attempt to force him into a position where Burns will have to box him. Gee will match Barry against Jack Johnson for a limited number of rounds, six to twenty or even more, at any place where a suitable purse is offered. BASEBALL TOPICS.

Some Notes That Will Prove Interesting to Followers of the Game.

One of the most promising of the new crop of baseball recruits in the American league is E. Gladstone Graney, the young south paw twirler whom the Cleveland team secured from the Williamsburgh New York State league club last fall.

Graney has performed some great pitching feats in some of the Naps' practices games. He has an outcurve and an incurve to right handed hitters that is a dandy. He also has a fine straight ball, with lots of steam behind it, and throws a good spit ball.

President P. T. Powers announces that the Eastern league will open on April 22 with the clubs of the western division in the east. Buffalo will open at Providence, Rochester at Newark, Toronto at Jersey City and Montreal at Baltimore.

TAFT TALKS IN LOUISVILLE

SECRETARY OF WAR DEFENDS REPUBLICAN POLICIES.

Make Address in Evening After Public Reception and Speech in the Open Air.

Louisville, Ky., Apr. 11.—Secretary of War Taft ended an eventful five hours in Louisville by a speech Friday night at the Hopkins theater.

The secretary arrived in Louisville at 2:50 p. m., and after a rapid ride downtown from Crescent Hill, was given a public reception at the Galt house. After dinner at the residence of Marshall Bullitt, he addressed an overflow meeting in front of the theater.

Secretary Taft upon entering Hopkins theater for his principal address was accorded a thundering welcome. In opening his address he referred to his service as judge of the United States circuit court having jurisdiction over Kentucky, and recalled a number of personal memories of Louisville leaders in the legal profession.

"We have before us," said the secretary, "a campaign presenting many serious issues. Some others are not so important, but are being kept alive by the gentleman who, I presume, will head the Democratic column. Mr. Bryan, I presume, speaks for the Democratic party."

At this mention of Mr. Bryan's name there was scattering but vigorous applause. Secretary Taft smilingly said: "I am glad that there appear to be a number of Democrats disguised as followers of Mr. Bryan in the house. I hope they will stay and hear a little sound doctrine."

Amid laughter and cheers the secretary then launched into a discussion of the policies of the McKinley and Roosevelt administrations, in regard to the acquisition and government of the Philippines and other colonies acquired as a result of the Spanish-American war.

In the days when Jimmy Barry was knocking down his opponents like tenpins there was a great deal of interest in that class, but since Barry retired the little fellows have not made much progress. It would appear, however, that through the achievements of Johnny Coulson, a Chicago 105 pounder, the little class again will get to the front. HOW TO BUILD A
GOOD DIRT ROAD

ADVICE FROM U. S. OFFICE OF PUBLIC ROADS.

PRACTICAL SUGGESTIONS

Various Instruments Which Are Constant Friends of the Road Overseer.

While American road builders are as capable of constructing good roads as those of any country of the old world, they have not been as loyally supported as the men of those countries in maintaining the highways after completion, and the deplorable state of many hundred thousand miles of road is thus accounted for. County and township officials may at the outset stand the expense of having a road built, but they strenuously object when asked to provide funds to rebuild the road that has been allowed to go to ruin.

It is important that farmers learn of the benefits to be derived from good earth roads; that county boards be impressed with the need of a proper maintenance of the same, and that road builders and overseers learn how best to care for the roads in their charge.

The persistent and powerful enemies of earth roads are water and narrow tires, and the constant effort of the man in charge of the roads should be to guard against their destructive effects and remedy all damage as quickly as possible. The simple implements which have been found to be of greatest assistance in this work are the plow, the drag scraper, the wheel scraper, the road grader, and the split-log drag.

With a sandy soil and a sub-soil of clay or gravel, road building is so easy and so simple that it can be done by the farmer with a plow and a drag scraper, the road grader,
the wheel scraper, the road grader,
and the split-log drag. The combination of a sand-clay road at a trifling expense. On the other hand, if the road be entirely of sand a mistake will be made if it is plowed unless clay can be added. Such plowing would merely deepen the sand, and at the same time break up the small amount of hard surface material which may have formed. If the subsoil be clay and the surface sand it is, of course, a mistake to plow in sand or gravel, plowing should not be resorted to, as it would result in a clay surface rather than one of sand or gravel. A road foreman must know not only what to plow and what not to plow, but how and when to plow. If the road is of the kind which according to the above instructions should be plowed over its whole width, the best method is to run the first furrow in the middle of the road and work out to the sides, thus forming a crown. Results from such plowing are greatest in the spring or early summer.

In ditches a plow can be used to good advantage, but should be followed by a scraper or grader. To make wide, deep ditches nothing better than the ordinary drag scraper has yet been devised. For hauls under 100 feet, or in making "fills" it is especially serviceable. It is a mistake, however, to attempt to haul long haul material with this scraper, as the wheel scraper is better adapted to such work. For hauls of more than 300 feet, a wagon should be used.
The machine most generally used in road work is the grader, or road machine. This machine is especially useful in smoothing and crowning the road and in opening ditches. A clay sub-soil under a thin coating of soil should not be disturbed with a grader.
It is also a mistake to use a grader indiscriminately and to pull material from beneath a sand-clay road.

Not infrequently dirt, soil and silt from ditch bottoms are piled in the middle of the road in a ridge, making much holes a certainty. It is important in using a grader to avoid building up the road too much at one time.
A road gradually built up by frequent use of the grader will last better than if completed at one operation. The foreman frequently thinks his road must be high in the first instance.
He piles up material from ten inches to a foot in depth only to learn, with the arrival of the first rain, that he has furnished the material for his many inches of mud. All material should be brought up in thin layers, each layer well puddled and firmly packed by roller or traffic before the next is added. A common mistake is

REVEREND HART IN

A STRONG ADDRESS

Evangelistic Meeting Last Evening

Was Well Attended and the Hearers Heard a Beautiful Sermon.

Evangelistic meeting last night was of deep interest to all. The sermon was one of the most tender Mr. Hart has preached. The text—"How shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation?" He took three words—great escape, neglect, and about these he wove his discourse. The gospel is great in its origin, in its possibility, in its sacrifice, in its awareness of salvation to everyone who comes to Christ.

There is only one way to God—through Christ. There are no substitutes. Men may be honest but yet miss the way. Morality will not save.

Through Christ, God will blot out sin;
will forgive sin, will forget about it;

will remove it. He gave touching and splendid illustrations to show how God will treat the sinner who will trust in him. God will keep every man who will come. The Jesus who is the only cure for the drunkard, the will save everyone who really comes to him wholly completely.

He both warned and pleaded with men in his presentation of the other words, escape and neglect. Many came forward at the close of the meeting.

BUGGY COULD NOT

OVERTAKE BUZZ-CART

But Mrs. John Cribben Spotted Number 1-4 Mile Away When Passenger Picked Up Her Lost Purse.

The engine was pounding and the buggy was being driven by the driver of a mile back of him, as he alighted from his automobile on the road south of the city yesterday afternoon to pick up a lady's pocketbook which had attracted the attention of himself and a companion. He climbed into the machine with the "bug" and the car resumed its rapid progress toward the distant sky line.

Meanwhile, Mrs. John Cribben of the town of Rock, one of the buggy passengers and the owner of the pocketbook, had succeeded in deciphering

the number of the machine "92 W."

and when the ladies found that they could not make themselves heard, they turned back to the city and reported the matter to City Marshal Appleby.

Three hours later Officer Sam Brown located the machine at the corner of Milwaukee and Main streets. Mr.

Bills was glad to turn the property over to the police department as he was just about to advertise for the owner when acquainted with the distinctive of the "bug" in which he and his associate had been completely oblivious. The purse contained about three dollars in money and several small articles of value. Mrs.

Cribben dropped it while driving towards Janesville and discovered her loss as she reached the Monterey bridge. The automobile passed the rig soon after it had been turned about and the ladies were retracing

the route over which they had passed.

Monday Morning.

For the last few days the men at the old yards have been engaged in moving the equipment of the shops out to the new South Janesville equipment must be out at the new yards by Monday morning so that work can be commenced there. The removal of some of the shop machinery has been going on for some time but during the last few days, especially, it has been rushed out to the new buildings. Every lathe, forge, etc.,

has to be taken down, loaded upon that cars, hauled to South Janesville practically everything will be out of the old shops.

WRECKING THE CITY HALL.

San Francisco, March 11.—Above picture shows the conditions in which the earthquake left the $1,000,000 city hall two years ago. The magnificent dome and the wings of the building remained intact and are furnishing great difficulty in razing the building. At the time the city hall was built graft was charged, but as the salvage company gets into the details of the construction they find that it is perhaps one of the most strongly constructed buildings on the coast. The method usually employed in wrecking buildings has been of no avail against the strong masonry of this building. Most of the debris is hauled to a vacant lot a few blocks away where 90 per cent is ground into fine-grained and the balance, representing the un-injured bricks, carefully piled and sold to builders at almost standard prices. One curious freak of the shattering of this building was that the heroic figure of "Victory" surmounting the dome was uninjured.

THE CAPTAIN OF the KANSAS

By LOUIS TRACY,

Author of "The Wings of the Morning," "The Pillar of Light," Etc.

COPYRIGHT, 1900, BY EDWARD J. CLODE

"I propose," continued Courtney, raising his voice so that the other might hear, "to give the ship steering

The second officer, outside on the bridge, had to cling to a stanchion for his life.

way by holding the foremast. Will you see to it? Then I intend to warn the passengers and make such preparations as are possible before we strike."

"Huh," agreed Mr. Doyle. He took the short cut over the rails. In a few seconds the captain heard a flow of ornate Spanish, and he knew that Mr. Doyle was getting the scared Chileans to work.

Then Courtney went to his own cabin, in which, in the haste of his exit, he had imprisoned Joey. The dog received him with delight, for Joey knew a real gale from a sham one as well as any man before the mast.

Courtney patted his head, opened a drawer in the writing table and drew forth two photographs, which he kissed. He replaced them, locked the drawer and went out, letting the dog come with him. That was his farewell to his mother and sister. It was the first and last sign of sentiment he exhibited during that night of great endurance.

When he returned from the salon he found the chief officer examining the chart.

"Do you think we have any chance of making Concepcion strait?" he asked, pointing to the doubtfully marked channel which separates Hatter and Duke of York islands.

"If we set the mizzen! we might bear up a bit."

"Huh," said Mr. Doyle, and he was off again into the windmill.

Do it understood that the sails carried by a big vessel like the Kansas are of little practical value save under certain conditions of wind and sea, when they are rigged to steady her and thus give help to helm and propeller.

Still, they might serve now to carry the ship a point or two toward the north, and this was the sole avenue of escape which remained.

Leaving the chart on the table, where it was secured by drawing pins, Courtney went back to his cabin to obtain a pair of sea boots. Feeling Joey sitting on his tail and shivering, unable to indulge in a comfortable lick because the taste of salt water was hateful, he hunted for a padded mackintosh coat which he had procured for the dog's protection in cold latitudes. He rummaged two lockers before he found it.

Several articles were trampled in a heap on the floor in his haste, and he did not trouble to pick them away again. He buckled Joey into the garment, fastened his own oilskins and rejoined the second officer on the bridge. A glance showed him the dark wall of the mainland rising about the after funnel. The quartermaster at the wheel, having recovered his wits, was keeping the ship's nose up to the wind by a steady pressure to port. The gale was as fierce as ever. The second officer shouted in Courtney's ear:

"I am afraid, sir, the wind has shifted a point."

Courtney looked at the compass. The ship was bearing exactly north-east. He had hoped that the sails would enable her to shape due north at least. Unquestionably some spiteful fiend was urging her headlong to ruin. Had the wind but veered as much to the south he might have cleared the run through Concepcion strait or even weathered Duke of York Island. He nodded to his junior, whose presence on the bridge was a mere matter of form owing to the powerless condition of the ship and the impenetrable wall of foam and mist that barred vision ahead, and strode off on a tour of inspection. As wind and sea were now beating more directly on the port side, there was some degree of shelter along the covered-in deck to starboard. He found that two boats had been cleared of their hamper and lowered on the davits until they could be swung in on the promenade deck. The men were thus able to provision them more easily than in their exposed berths on the spar deck. He watched the workers for a few minutes, showed them how to stow and lash some biscuit thus more securely and continued his survey, meaning to look in on Walker and the doctor.

He had to pass the cabin set apart for the two girls. The ports were lighted, and through the window he could see some one peering out at him. Owing to the thickness of the glass and its blurred condition he could not tell whether the occupant was Elsie or Isabel or Isabel's maid; but, whoever it was, a hand seemed to signal to him to open the door.

He unfastened the bolts and held a half door slightly ajar. Joey, ever eager to be out of the polling storm, hopped inside, and Courtney heard Elsie exclaim:

"Good gracious, Joey! Where is your life belt?"

"Do you want anything?" asked Courtney through the chink.

Elsie smiled at him. She was wrapped in a heavy mink and had a tan-colored shawl tied firmly on her head by a stout veil.

"Mr. Malcolm thought we had better bring life belts from our cabins. I came for mine, and I looked out and saw you. I wanted to ask you what had become of Dr. Christobal. I hope you don't mind."

"Not in the least. I am just going to him. Would you care to come?"

"Oh, I shall be most pleased!"

"Is he attending the injured men, you know, and there are others there who are beyond his help?"

"Perhaps I may be of some assistance."

"Come, then. When I open the door step out quickly and hold tight to that rail, and don't move until I tell you."

His manner was curt enough to please the superciliousness of a nun. Elsie was averted instantly by the glimpse she obtained of the flying sea within the narrow area of the salon lights, but she obeyed directions and presently found herself clinging desperately to the brass hand rail which ran breast high along the outer wall of her cabin. Then she felt an arm grip her tightly around the waist, and she heard a voice, which sounded as if it had traveled down a long corridor, shouting in her ear:

"Lean well back and trust to me! Let go!"

She had no idea that wind could blow like that, especially when the ship was going in the same direction. It shrieked and whistled and tore at the canvas side awnings with a violence that threatened to rip them from their stays. Courtney held her glued to his left side, and there was something reassuring in the visible grasp. She had a dim notion that he would not squeeze her quite so earnestly until she passed a gangway which led to the port side between the deck cabins and the music room. Then she changed her opinion. Were it not for the strong arm which held her she would have been blown into the sea.

"Who knows?"

"It will be all the same wherever she is. If the ship goes, we go."

"Who can tell? These English are stupid. They always try to save women first. Once when I was on the—"

A few words in Spanish reached them from Mr. Doyle, and they went on with their work. But such muttered confidences are eloquent of sublimity when the pinch comes.

At the foremast end of the promenade deck just beneath the bridge Elsie received another reminder of the force of the wind, which was rendered almost intolerable by the lashing of the spray.

"I can't—go on!" she gasped. Courtney felt rather than heard that she was speaking to him. Without further ado he picked her up in his arms and deposited her, all flushed and breathless, in the shelter of the foremast hatch. It was so anxious to see her friend the doctor, he was determined she should not be disappointed.

"No time for explanations," he said, while she tremblingly clutched at a rail which gave support down the companionway. "Dr. Christobal is below, but—fear you will find a shocking scene. Perhaps you had better let me take you back."

"No, no; not on my account. I think I am just feeling any sentiment. I would far rather do something, be of some use, however slight."

A pungent smell of iodine came to them up the hatchway. Joey, who had followed bravely in their wake and was now a few steps down the stairs, crept back, wailing.

"At least let me ask Dr. Christobal if you may come. You will be quite safe here if you grip the rail. Even if a sea breaks over the hatch it cannot touch you. May I leave you? And do you mind holding Joey?"

Elsie detected a return to his earlier manner, and she was grateful to him for it. She did not like him so well when he was stern and curt.

"Yes," she said. "That is only reasonable, but please tell him I shall not be in the way. I know that there are wounded men to be attended and dead men down there too. I shall not scream or faint, believe me."

"I am sure of that. Not one woman in a thousand could have played and sung to cheer others as you did after the accident happened."

It might have been the reaction from her exciting passage along the deck, but Elsie experienced a sudden warm glow in her face. Somehow it was delightful to hear those words from such a man in the hour of his supreme trial, for she realized what it meant to him, even though his life was saved, if the Kansas became a wreck.

She stooped, ostensibly to grasp the dog's collar.

"Before you leave me," she said, "let me tell you how sorry I am for you."

He ran down the stairs and entered the small salon, which had been hastily converted into a hospital. Perhaps it would be better described as a mortuary, for it held more dead than living. Christobal, aided by two sailors, was wrapping up a man in a blanket, while the men tore them into strips, and the men tore them into strips, and the men tore them into strips.

Serious Evidence Against Thomas McGonigle and Mrs. Burnett.

Richmond, Mo., Apr. 11.—In the trial here Friday of Thomas McGonigle and Mrs. Jane Burnett, accused of the murder of Mrs. Margaret McGonigle, Thomas Burnett, 21 years old, son of a farmer, said that in 1907 Thomas McGonigle offered him $150 if he would kill Mrs. McGonigle.

He said he refused to do so, and that McGonigle then threatened to kill him if he revealed what he had said.

He said that Tom McGonigle told him that Mrs. McGonigle should never have a child; that he would kill her first. The explanation of this is that there is an estate involved and another child would cause a further division of it. Had Mrs. McGonigle lived she would have become a mother.

Mrs. Fannie Davis testified that Tom McGonigle and his sister, Mrs. Burnett, had offered her $50 to kill Mrs. McGonigle. Thomas, she testified, had fixed a bottle of wine with poison in it to give to Mrs. McGonigle, but witness had destroyed the wine. Then they wanted her to shoot Mrs. McGonigle, she testified, and leave the revolver and a hat at the house to give the impression that a man had killed her. At another time they gave her some poisoned cake to give to her. Mrs. Jane Burnett, the witness said, had told her that she would kill Mrs. McGonigle.

The Philosopher of Folly.

"Wine is a mocker," says the philosopher of folly. "And even coffee is likely to be a Java. But please don't put this down as one of my sayings. It doesn't mean anything, really."

Women Who Wear Well.

It is astonishing how great a change a few years of married life often make in the appearance and disposition of many women. The freshness, the charm, the brilliancy vanish like the bloom from a peach which is rudely handled. There are two reasons for this change, ignorance and neglect. Few young women appreciate the shock to the system through the change which comes with marriage and motherhood. Many neglect to deal with the unpleasant pelvic drains and weaknesses which too often come with marriage and motherhood, not understanding that this secret drain is robbing the cheek of its freshness and the form of its fairness.

As surely as the general health suffers when there is derangement of the health of the delicate woman's organs, so surely will these organs be established in health by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It makes weak women strong and sick women well. Ingredients on label—contains no alcohol or harmful habit-forming drugs. Made wholly of those native, American, medicinal roots most highly recommended by leading medical authorities of all times.

For nursing mothers, or for those broken-down in health by too frequent bearing of children, also for the expectant mothers, baby and making its advent easy and almost painless, there is no medicine quite so good as "Favorite Prescription." It can do no harm in any condition of the system. It is a most potent invigorating tonic and strength-giving medicine adapted to woman's delicate system by a physician of large experience in the treatment of woman's peculiar ailments.
